GEOG 4710 – Ecosystems: Structure, Function, & Services examines the interactions between organisms and their physical environment as an integrated system and seeks to understand the factors that regulate the quantity and flow of materials and energy through ecological systems. This course will focus on terrestrial ecosystems: their structure (how they are built), their function (how they work), and how structure and function translate into ecosystem goods and services.