We would also appreciate your written input on this candidate in an attached letter. We are interested in your estimate of the candidate’s general promise as a graduate student. The more the recommendation reflects your knowledge of the candidate and their performance, the more useful this letter will be to our committee and the candidate. Your letter should address each of the following specific points, if possible:

- Intellectual characteristics: How would you rate the candidate in overall intelligence? How well do they learn and retain information? How skilled are they in terms of analysis and logic? How well do they deal with complex or abstract concepts? Are they creative in their thought processes?

- Knowledge of study field: How deep and broad is the candidate’s knowledge of their chosen field? Are they skilled in using applicable data collection and analytical methods? Do they have research experience? If so, of what kind?

- Communication ability: Is the candidate a skilled writer? Is their written material clear, well-presented, and logically organized? How well does the candidate speak in public?

- Self-discipline: To what extent is the candidate persistent, efficient, and motivated to achieve the goals they have set? Are they able to work independently?

- Personal qualities: Does the candidate have the maturity needed for graduate study? Are they trusted and respected by their peers?

- Overall potential: What is your prediction of the candidate’s probable performance in graduate school?

Thank you for your time and insights related to this candidate.
