

GEOG 2110 - Foundations of Geographic Research is the gateway course for geography majors. The course focuses on skills that will be important for moving through the major and ultimately for geography-related careers. We will focus on developing three sets of skills: study/academic, professional and research skills, all of which are transferable to any career path. As such, this course can be seen as a professional development class.