

GEOG 4560 – Introduction to Python Programming is an introductory course that covers the basics of Python programming, Structured Query Language (SQL) programming, and spatial databases (PostGIS). Python is a powerful, general purpose programming language that is used for automation, scientific analysis, and other data management and visualization tasks. This course is meant to be an applied, introductory programming course and does not require prior programming or GIS experience.